CLUBS

My arrival to school on a dark and stormy day was tardy. It was 10:00 a.m. . . . I had missed Ms. Mastro's Religion class and Geography with Mr. Kousik had already commenced. I knew I was in for it. Ms. Del Torto's words were ringing in my ears. "Tardiness is unacceptable at the Sacred Heart School of Montreal, young lady . . ." Hmm . . . my brain was straining for a possible route of escape, when it hit me . . . as an active and resourceful member of the Debating Club, I quickly evaluated the problematic situation. My natural charm and flair for words were already to my advantage. I delivered a fine speech: complete with perfect articulation, good rhythm with an ending that would have made even the best of speechwriters proud. To no avail, I was brutally rebuffed. Although Ms. Del Torto was thoroughly impressed with the skills I had learned from Mrs. Mastropasqua and Mrs. Filipovich, she did not let me off the hook. However, neither did she have the heart to issue me a regular detention. Instead, I was instructed to remain after school hours and compose an inventory of all the existing clubs at Sacred Heart. "Oh, golly darn." I thought to myself, "there goes afternoon tea with the queen."

However, I soon discovered that many clubs took place during the lunch hour. "Rriing . . ." The clock had struck twelve. After swallowing my lunch whole, I set out on my quest. I was mysteriously drawn to the music room where a distant primal beat beckoned me to enter the darkened area. Suddenly, I found myself surrounded by the energetic members of Club Getaway. The music was overwhelming and my feet seemed to now possess a mind of their own. "I was groovin' to the beat", I stated to Sharon, one of the co-founders of the club. Richelle and Carol, the other two co-founders were already movin' to the Macarena. "My work here was done", I thought to myself. The inventory now had two clubs, Debating and Getaway.

Needing to clear my head, I opted for the peaceful atmosphere of the chapel. Little did I know that Mr. Shaw and his Liturgical Choir were rehearsing for the upcoming school mass. I listened closely to the words of wisdom each song expressed. Mr. Shaw strummed his guitar while the choir rendered an especially rollicking version of "Amazing Grace". I silently exited the chapel and climbed to the fourth floor.

Suddenly, I spotted a herd of girls carrying enormous brown boxes headed straight for me. Their faces were hidden by the excessive mounds of paper they were transporting and I soon learnt they were headed to the recycling bins in the basement. It was all part of their responsibilities as members of the Environment Club, someone informed me. Mrs. Kular and Ms. Thomas headed the club someone else chimed in. To avoid a collision I clattered up the stairs with as much grace as I could muster. I had narrowly missed being smothered by the recycling clan and I now found myself on the fifth floor.

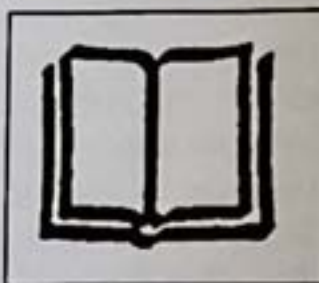

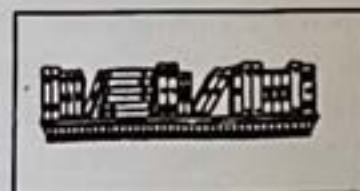

I ducked into the computer cove, disheveled and out of breath. A few people were gathered around the teacher's desk. It appeared that some form of communication was taking place, but not a sound was to be heard. It did not register in my mind that these girls were communicating with sign language. I had simply presumed that they were of above average intelligence. Ms. Bruce made her way over to where I stood and extensively explained the workings of the Sign Language Club. The conversation then turned to the subject of cheerleading. I learnt that Ms. Bruce was also in charge of a Cheerleading Club that took place after school. "Rriing . ." Oh. It was time to return for my afternoon classes. I checked my schedule and discovered that my first class was Art. Possessing little to no artistic talents, I reluctantly steered myself towards the art room. Upon arrival, I saw Mrs. Klugerman preparing for her session with the Art Club after school. She then informed me that I was to paint an abstract tableau. I momentarily thought of ringing my friend the queen. Perhaps she could lend me a Picasso or a Van Gogh for inspiration.

I was soon brought back to reality when Ms. O'Neill dashed in to grab the few props she needed for Drama Club. This club met weekly after school in the reception room. The bell rang loudly signaling the end of class so I moved on to Physical Education. Our subject this term was gymnastics, which reminded me to suit up for a Gymnastics Club practice the next day with Ms. Vaupshas and the other club members. This in turn, reminded me to look my absolute best and perfect my smile as members of the Photography Club were going to be present taking snapshots for the yearbook. I thought on and realized that not only were, we going to be photographed but we were to share the gym with the Aerobics Club, also run by Ms. Vaupshas. Boy, was she going to have her hands full or what . .

After a sweaty 45 minutes on the beam, I quickly changed and headed for English class with Ms. De Mello. While we completed our essays on the life of William Shakespeare, she informed us about the upcoming meeting of the Chatterbooks Club. However, while she was speaking, Ms. Mastro just happened to pop in to enquire about literature that would be useful for her Liturgical Meeting after school. I was thoroughly enjoying this. Not only was precious class time being lost but my task was being handed to me on a silver platter.

All of a sudden, a burst of singing was heard. It seemed to be coming from below. But of course. How perfectly dense of me. It was Ms. Martel's Chorale singing at the annual meeting of the Parents' Guild. Those lucky souls were missing class. The bell rang signaling the end of school. As I gathered my books, none other than Ms. Del Torto appeared at my desk. She enquired about my results and seemed rather pleased with my response. It was Wednesday, still dark and stormy, time for the weekly gathering of Vocal Ensemble headed by Ms. Martel. I was entering the domain of singing, singing and more singing. Vocal Ensemble is rehearsing intensively for a trip to Toronto. I leave as quietly as I entered. It is time now for my departure from Sacred Heart when I spot Mrs. Kular and Ms. Thomas discussing the latest in the wide world of field hockey. These women are of course in charge of the Field Hockey Club. As I'm stepping out I once again cross paths with Ms. Del Torto and proudly hand her the list.

And so, as the day had dawned, so it ended and I could once more reflect upon the incessant activity of my small community.

STUDENT LIFE

DASHABUSTADD

Dashabustadd 1996 was a unique experience. First, students shared brunch with the teachers for the grand finale of Teacher Appreciation Week. The talent show ensued. Variety is said to be the spice of life. Indeed, the audience at "Vaudeville Auditorium" enjoyed acts from tap dancing, and stepping to the 'end of an era' - the end of the Charlie's.

CANDIDS

CARNIVAL

Carnival 1996 was an awesome experience. The weather was cold but nice as we headed for the slopes. Things were a bit different this year as many students tried their hand at snowboarding. Others went tubing and skiing. Students also enjoyed various activities on the Friday. Carnival was ended of course with the dance at Loyola.

IF

If words are not in my mouth
If I can't tell north from south
If my world is in despair
It's because you're not there.

If it's so cold inside of me
If it's too dark for me to see
If everything seems unfair
It's because you're not there.

If I lose all my energy
If I live a life of misery
If my days become blue
It's because I need you.

CHOICES

They come from your own head,
meaning they're in your own hands.

And when chaos overshadows logic,
then they're still in your own hands.

And when you think there is no other alternative,
then they still come from your own head.

And when circumstances make you forget you do
have a choice,
then they're still in your own hands.

And so, you can choose to love me for who I am or,
you can continue to condemn me for who I am not.

It's your choice, it comes from your own head,
and is left in your own hands.

COMPLICATIONS

A complicated twist,
blasting through your mind,
what does the world mean?
Just turn up the volume.
A complicated spin
the beat wraps around,
who am I?
Plug in the amp.
I'm discovering myself.
A complicated beat
is it fast or slow?
Leave the music on,
leave it on forever.
Things are always unfurling
with complicated feelings.
The sounds of life wash them away
those complications of life.
My questionable identity,
don't turn the music off.
It makes all the complications,
uncomplicated.

The Last Indian Summer

I
I stood there at the bus stop,
And let the strength of the warm wind push onto me.
I leaned into it, letting it flow through my hair,
And caress my face, as I flew to the ends of the world,
While standing in one place.
The dead leaves came alive and began to dance with the wind.
They were children that had not yet lost their innocence,
Playing ring-around-the-rosy,
As the world bustled and grumbled around them.
They were my past, forever blowing in the wind,
Never ceasing to stop their endless game of tag.
Until the wind stopped and mother called us in for bed.

II
The next day, it snowed,
Burying my childhood beneath the coldness.
Until the next Indian Summer comes again,
So all the leaves can dance once more,
... or at least those that are left.

EVERY-BODY?

ALICE IN WONDERLAND.

"Alice in Wonderland" was certainly a challenge and an experience to produce. Our mandate was to bring Wonderland to life, with all its crazy characters and animals. With Ms. Arseneault's incredible creativity, patience and determination, we pulled it off! Of course, the cast deserves some recognition as well: I don't think any of us thought we would ever spend so much time at school for any reason! Well, after frequent arguments and endless support of one another, the cast became as close as a family. On Friday night, after our last performance together, I wondered if all the months of rehearsing and painting sets, and rehearsing and painting sets, were worth three nights of stardom ... I think everyone would say a resounding, "Yes"!

WALK-A-THON

Most people will remember this year's Walk-a-thon as being cool and damp. But despite the unpleasant weather, our willingness to help our charity, St. Gabriel's Parish, remained intact. On May 11th, students from Villa Maria, Q.A.A., Loyola, and Sacred Heart trekked along a shortened route, which brought us back to Loyola for lunch and entertainment.

MEMORY BOOK COMMITTEE

In June of 1995, I volunteered for the position of editor-in-chief for the school's memory book, not knowing the extent of the responsibilities and hours of work that come with the job. Although it was a huge undertaking, in retrospect I find that I do not regret one layout, one picture, one moment. Editors and photographers alike were of constant support. The staff was comprised of motivated and innovative girls who did not hesitate to stay a little longer or take a few more pictures before a deadline. Thanks to the committee, new looks and ideas were introduced. A big thank you to Tanya, our business manager, for bearing with me and helping me get the advertising idea off and running. Also, I would like to express my sincere thanks to Mrs. Rudinskas, our advisor. Her receptiveness was a source of encouragement throughout the year. I hope everyone enjoys ETCHINGS 1996!!
